

1

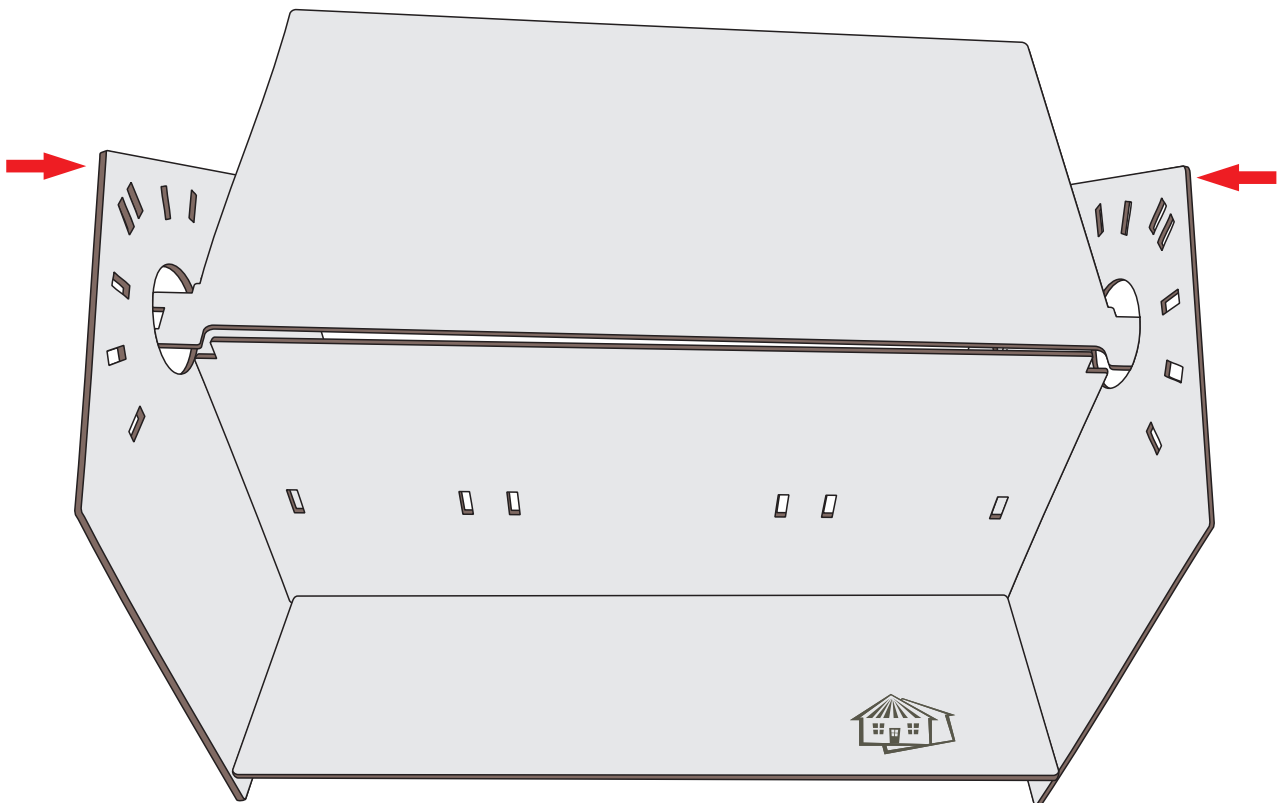

2

3

4

A diagram of a house showing the locations of various types of locks and door handles. Red arrows point to the following components:

- A padlock on the front door handle.
- A deadbolt lock on the front door.
- A window lock on a window in the living room.
- A window lock on a window in the bedroom.
- A window lock on a window in the bathroom.
- A window lock on a window in the kitchen.
- A window lock on a window in the hallway.
- A window lock on a window in the garage.
- A window lock on a window in the attic.
- A window lock on a window in the basement.
- A window lock on a window in the crawlspace.
- A window lock on a window in the roof.
- A window lock on a window in the foundation.
- A window lock on a window in the walls.
- A window lock on a window in the ceiling.
- A window lock on a window in the floor.
- A window lock on a window in the stairs.
- A window lock on a window in the porch.
- A window lock on a window in the patio.
- A window lock on a window in the deck.
- A window lock on a window in the balcony.
- A window lock on a window in the terrace.
- A window lock on a window in the garden.
- A window lock on a window in the yard.
- A window lock on a window in the driveway.
- A window lock on a window in the street.
- A window lock on a window in the neighborhood.
- A window lock on a window in the town.
- A window lock on a window in the city.
- A window lock on a window in the state.
- A window lock on a window in the country.
- A window lock on a window in the world.

6

This diagram shows the roof being attached to the main body of the house. Red arrows indicate the placement of four corner brackets and one central ridge bracket. The roof is shown as a separate piece being aligned with the house structure.

